SUFFRAGE "ARMY" HAS BUSY TIME IN BALTIMORE

"Gen." Jones Puts Aside Social Affairs for "Votes for Women" Campaign.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 24.—Most of the members of "Gen." Jones's suffrage army, which marched into Baltimore last evening on the way to Washington, remained in bed this forenoon, obtaining much needed rest in preparation for a busy afternoon and evening of speech-making.

"Gen." Jones had completely cancelled all of the many arrangements for the entertainment of the pilgrims during their two days' stay here except the luncheon tendered them by Mrs. Donald R. Hooker, president of the Maryland Just Government League, at her home in Govans to-day, and another luncheon for to-morrow by the Sons of Jove, the local engineers' club.

In declining the various hospitalities offered "Gen." Jones said she felt the time here could better be employed in preaching the doctrine of equal suffrage to the unconverted.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Saturday evening following the formal entry into Washington of "Gen." Rosalie Jones and her "Army" of hikers from New York rival demonstrations will be made by the suffragists and anti-suffragists of the capital. The suffragists have planned a large banquet and a similar affair will be held by the "anti's."

Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge of New York, President of the Association Opposed to Woman's Suffrage, arrived here to-day and assumed general direction of the anti-suffrage campaign. With Miss Minnie Bronson, the general secretary, she began the work of arranging the demonstration on Saturday night. Miss Bronson said that an effort would be made to have a large number of leading women come from New York for the occasion. Speakers of national repute would be asked to address the gathering.

The pilgrims who became lost from the main body yesterday and stayed overnight at Overlea, an eastern suburb, this morning marched to Govans, on the northern edge of the city, where they reunited with the "army" at Mrs. Hooker's luncheon. "Col." Ida Craft led the detachment.

GAYNOR INSPECTS BOWERY.
On his way from his home to the City Hall to-day Mayor Gaynor, instead of walking across the Brooklyn Bridge, went out of his course and went down Flatbush avenue extension and thence across the Manhattan Bridge. Then he walked down the Bowery from Canal street to Chatham Square, continuing his hike through Park Row to the City Hall.

The short Bowery trip was not made hurriedly. The mayor stopped in front of several resorts, gazed through the windows and read the signs. He was not recognized by anyone on the Bowery. The mayor did not explain the purpose of his early day inspection of Bowery sights.

What'll Stop Sour Stomach?

They Act Quick and Relief Is Almost Immediate.

There are some things so exactly right that to mention them brings calm and relief. And to use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets gives the stomach just that kind of lift that makes you check up one hundred per cent. to the good. Particularly is this true with those who suffer with sour stomach. You feel so mean that you actually hate yourself. And yet in a few minutes these tablets sweeten the stomach, arrest unnatural fermentation, start a powerful digestive action and prevent the formation of gas.

They are composed of only such delicate as are approved by the very best of physicians.

Real, live, progressive people want to be around where the activities of life embrace whatever circumstances dictate. If a house party serves a Welsh rabbit go to it. It isn't the easiest thing in the world to digest, it's true, but what if it's Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will take care of you. Keep your stomach in control and your dreams won't see an army of hobgoblins playing havoc with your nerves. Many physicians regularly prescribe Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets for the stomach disorders of patients who are ill with some constitutional malady. They do so for the reason that these tablets are not a patent medicine and their composition is known and recognized as the most approved and most powerful of all digestants.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold and recommended by all druggists at 20c a box.

Good Manners for Young American Girls As Described by a Deportment Expert

Miss Ethel Bury-Palliser, Who Has Instructed the Daughters of Titled Parents in England, Gives a Series of Interviews for the Benefit of Mothers and Maids.

She Not Only Points Out the Defects in the Training of Our Girls but Suggests the Remedies—Paint and Powder Denounced.

Marguerite Moores Marshall.

Miss Ethel Bury-Palliser is an acknowledged authority on good manners for young girls both in England and in the United States. She has been instructor in deportment and dancing for the families of the late Duchess of Rutland, the Dowager Countess of Winchelsea and Nottingham, Viscountess Templeton and many other persons of title. She is in charge of annual courses at our most select private schools, and Mrs. George J. Gould is one of her patronesses. For the benefit of American mothers and daughters she has given a series of interviews to The Evening World, in which she not only points out the defects in the training of our girls but suggests the remedies.

One of our national foregone conclusions (and about as idiotic as any of them) is the general assumption of the perfection of the American girl. She is the most beautiful, the most intelligent, the most charming—nothing but superlatives will express her. But is she such a creature of sweetness and light, except in her partial imaginations, or perhaps on the flattering tongue of the foreigner in love not with her but with her father's money?

Does she not, at least in many cases, dash her pretty face with rouge and powder? With pearl-powder? Hasn't she a tendency to stride and sprawl, instead of cultivating the graceful carriage and repose of manner which mark the true lady? Is she always respectful to her mother and those that are set in authority over her? Is she not apt to follow "the crowd," even if its activities lead her in directions from which her natural good taste shrinks?

DISCUSSING THE PREVALENCE OF MAKE-UP.

These were some of the questions which I asked Miss Ethel Bury-Palliser to discuss. And because The Evening World has been one of the foremost opponents of the present paint-and-powder regime among young girls, we took up first the important problem of the prevalence of make-up.

"It is certainly true that the American girl begins to use artificial aids for her complexion at a ridiculously early age," declared Miss Bury-Palliser. "No young girl in England with any pretensions to refinement ever touches paint and powder. But the widespread use of make-up in New York is such that it is often impossible to distinguish between the youthful members of the monde and the demi-monde. An Englishman, a friend of mine, walking down Fifth avenue at an hour when the best people in the city were out, exclaimed, 'It looks like a Piccadilly parade!'"

"Why do these young girls rouge?" I will tell you what is the reason in many cases. It is simply that they feel the absolute necessity for covering up their pale cheeks and the hollows under their eyes. The life of the young society girl in this country is one whirlwind of excitement, beginning early in the morning and lasting until the early hour of the next morning. Often there are only two or three hours reserved for sleep. The girls are convinced that without their make-up they would look like hags."

Miss Bury-Palliser paused for a moment, and I had a chance to observe her in detail. I know she's been an exceedingly busy woman, but I'm very certain that she has never lived according to the two-hours-sleep system. There isn't a line in her beautiful, cream-white skin, there isn't a wrinkle in her serenely reposeful attitude. Probably she has nerves and even worries like the rest of us.

WEARS ELABORATE HATS AND FROCKS PURSUES A ROUTINE OF GENTRY

SCHOOLGIRLS ALLOWED TOO MUCH FLING.

"It's not merely the girls already in society who overdo and then rouge to cover the ravages," she resumed. "The schoolgirl, in my opinion, is allowed altogether too much gaudy. In England the schoolgirl is kept in the school-room, and no one sees her."

"In America the schoolgirl is often bled before she has made her debut. She is taken around far too much. She goes too often to the theatre and the opera. At thirteen she becomes a society woman in miniature. She puts up her hair, lengthens her skirts and acts like a woman twice her age."

Miss Bury-Palliser's finely cut lips bent in a queer little smile.

"Really," she observed, "it seems odd to go back to England and see hundreds of little girls with skirts at their boot tops and thick pigstails hanging down their backs. Really, it takes one a little time to get used to it. One simply doesn't find those little girls in New York."

"If your grown-up little misses only realized it, they would be so much more attractive with the simple clothes and coiffures appropriate to their age. The costumes of mature women are not designed to suit growing girls, with their thin necks and arms and undeveloped figures. Aesthetically, it's a great mistake for them to copy the dresses of their mothers and their older sisters."

"And for the sake of their health and their future enjoyment of life these little girls should not be permitted to use the routine of their elders. There is a time for all things, and childhood, the period of school days, is a time for the healthful development of body and brain, not the overstimulation of either. To permit a girl during this period to indulge in a succession of adult pleasures is almost if not quite as bad as to force upon her a succession of adult labors."

"I suppose there are more nervous breakdowns among American women than among those of any other country. Your women try to do too much, of course, burning the candle at both ends. But I believe that at least one of the contributory causes to the many cases of prostration is the fact that even in their first girlhood these women have lived at a high pressure, using up completely the reserve force which should have reserved them for overstrain later on."

"But what sort of life do you advise for the schoolgirl?" I asked.

And then Miss Bury-Palliser proved that her criticism could be constructive as well as destructive.

"The school-girl should keep early hours," she began. "Nine hours of sleep is none too much. She should eat wholesome food at regular intervals; the confectionery-and-soda habit is demoralizing. She should wear simple clothes,

BROKERS' COMMITTEE ALL READY TO FIGHT TRANSFER TAX BILL
Will Go to Albany and Allege Business Community Is Unanimous Against It.

The special committee of ten recently appointed by President Mahon of the Stock Exchange to protest against the bill for the increase in the stock transfer tax met to-day to hear members of the Exchange who might have suggestions to offer.

On Wednesday at Albany there will be a public hearing on the Stock Transfer bill. Members of the committee will journey to the capital to enter a vigorous protest against the measure. That the committee may be informed as to the ideas of all the members, the opportunity was given them to-day to air their views.

Another meeting of the committee will be held this afternoon after the close of the market. It is possible that at the close of the afternoon session the committee may make some public statement.

WATERS PIANOS

Founded 1845

If you buy a Waters Piano or a Waters-Autola player-piano you can be positively assured of getting a superb, up-to-date instrument with a good tone; also of getting it at a reasonable and very moderate price.

The tone of the Waters Pianos is of great depth and richness, with a sweet, musical, singing quality, but it is also a very durable tone that will wear well under all conditions and will stand up to pitch.

The very moderate prices of the Waters Pianos and Waters-Autola player-pianos always represent good values that are in the interest of wise economy and not at the sacrifice of quality.

Most liberal terms of payment are offered, with no charge for interest or extras.

Old pianos taken in part payment for new ones.
